

UNVERIFIED CREATURE DOSSIER

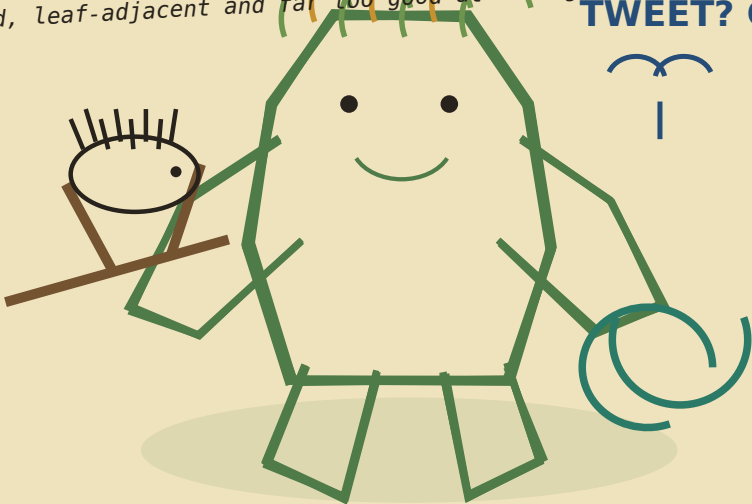

typed after birdsong, café confusion and one arboreal hedgehog

FULL CASE RESTRICTED • PASS REQUIRED

ALLEGED SUBJECT: MARK'S CORNER NYMPH

Green-and-gold, leaf-adjacent and far too good at hiding.

TWEET? GIGGLE!

hedgehog location remains scientifically awkward

LOCAL RUMOURS AND ALLEGED SIGHTINGS

THE TREE HEDGEHOG

A hedgehog was found halfway up an oak tree looking surprised by its own decision. Nobody saw it climb. Gravity has opened an enquiry.

THE GARDEN SHUFFLE

A rake became a spade and a hose tied itself into a sleeping-dragon knot. From the ivy came a laugh approximately the size of a teaspoon.

THE CHANGING MENU

Coffee became tea, sandwiches became cake and the café menu changed every few minutes. Customers eventually ordered by pointing and hoping.

THE BISCUIT VANE

A weather vane spun north, south, east, west and briefly towards a biscuit tin. A green-and-gold curl disappeared behind the hedge.

feather + acorn + wrong drink = nymph maths

NOTE:

OUTRAGEOUS CLAIMS RECEIVED BY THE PUBLIC DESK

- 'She speaks every bird language, including angry pigeon.'
- 'Hedgehogs grow on oak trees during very strange summers.'
- 'The café menu changes itself when nobody tips it.'
- 'The weather vane points towards the nearest biscuit.'

QUESTIONS THAT REMAIN UNANSWERED

STATUS: ALL OF THEM

- How did the hedgehog reach the branch without a ladder?
- Does a dragon-shaped hose require feeding?
- Can a robin provide an official translation?
- Which compass direction officially means 'biscuits'?
- Why did coffee become tea but never soup?
- Most importantly, is any of this even remotely true?

leaf evidence? it blew away immediately
