

UNVERIFIED CREATURE DOSSIER

typed while damp, sandy and missing one beach umbrella

FULL CASE RESTRICTED • PASS REQUIRED

ALLEGED SUBJECT: RYDE SEA SERPENT

Turquoise, thirty-foot-ish and not concealed by a sun hat.

thirty feet long, plus splash radius and hat brim

LOCAL RUMOURS AND ALLEGED SIGHTINGS

THE RYDE SPLASH

One enormous splash made towels flutter, umbrellas wobble and a picnic sandwich achieve brief flight. Children cheered. The sandwich has not issued a statement.

THE APPLEY HAT

A giant sun hat drifted towards the café. Beneath it were thirty feet of turquoise serpent and a strong interest in a towering sundae. Disguise score: one out of ten.

THE DOLPHIN REMATCH

At Puckpool, something long and shiny raced two dolphins, lost by half a flipper and demanded a rematch by drawing a question mark with its tail.

THE SEAVIEW SURPRISE

A serpent and a chimera spotted each other, screamed first and fled in opposite directions. Several children claim the beach hut shook with giggling.

wave + umbrella + empty sundae = serpent maths

QUESTIONS THAT REMAIN UNANSWEREDSTATUS: ALL OF THEM

- ☐ Where do thirty feet of serpent go beneath one small hat?
- ☐ Which flavour makes the most scientifically useful drool?
- ☐ Can an umbrella qualify for a flying licence?
- ☐ Why were Sammy and the chimera both surprised?
- ☐ Did the dolphins agree to the Puckpool rematch?
- ☐ Most importantly, is any of this even remotely true?
